

Introduction and Background

Sentebale is a charity working in Lesotho and Botswana to support some of the most vulnerable children and young people to lead healthy and productive lives. The Charity was founded in 2006 by Prince Harry, Duke of Sussex and Prince Seeiso following Prince Harry's gap year to Lesotho in 2004. Sentebale works directly in programmes with children and young people and also in partnership with local grassroots organisations, local and international NGOs and government institutions such as health clinics and schools.

Sentebale aims to reach children and young people living with or affected by HIV, especially the most vulnerable who are additionally challenged by issues of deprivation, exploitation, abuse or neglect. We tackle both the symptoms and root causes of HIV/AIDS through four programme areas – providing support and awareness, enabling advocacy and promoting empowerment. Sentebale has a particular focus on HIV/AIDS and aims to make a real difference in children's lives helping them to be more resilient, self-sufficient and have the chance to thrive.

Adequately addressing the needs of those we serve remains central to Sentebale. The inherent nature of our services to meet the needs shapes the investments in time, efforts and other resources to position us to have a proper comprehension of those whose needs we strive to meet by better engaging, and co-creating with the members of the target groups whose needs we seek to address.

Sentebale seeks to exploit the services of a Partner organisation or individual Consultant with experience in delivering Participatory Action Research or Human Centred programme design and delivery to support the Organization's internal capacity development effort; facilitate the participatory research method to the design of the Herd Boys Livelihood program in Lesotho and the documentation of the current situation.
